

Why You Need a Case for Support and How to Build One

There's a worrying trend out there in philanthropy land. Too many non-profits either don't have a case for support at all or have put a huge amount of effort and expense into creating one that, well... kinda sucks.

Cases for support are critically important to non-profit fundraising, and every non-profit should have one. No longer tied solely to capital campaigns, a strong case will pull your stakeholders together, touch people's hearts, and elevate philanthropy.

Join Leah Eustace, CFRE, ACFRE, as she shares the her case development secrets, along with plenty of examples of great cases.

Part of
Main Street Community
Foundation's
Nonprofit Education Series.

Wed., August 28, 2019

1:00 - 2:30 p.m.

Main Street Community Foundation

120 Halcyon Drive, Bristol

Presenter: Leah Eustace

Register by August 23, 2019
to Julie Matthews

Call: 860.583.6363

Email:

julie@mainstreetfoundation.org

Limited Seating.

There is no charge
for local nonprofits.

Main Street

COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

www.mainstreetfoundation.org